

Re: Allison Peters, RN

November, 2008

To whom it may concern:

It has been my great pleasure to work with Allison Peters in the OR at Shands/AGH. When I arrived at UF, pain management was done only rarely at AGH, and many of the procedures I was doing were completely foreign to the OR staff. In most facilities, anything new is viewed with suspicion and reluctance, but Allison embraced the new concepts, and was always eager to learn new techniques. She expedited cases, reassured patients, and anticipated needs. She was a leader and a role model for the other staff members. In short, she was the perfect OR nurse.

She is a hard worker, having worked full time as she continued her education, juggling work, study, and motherhood. In addition, I have enjoyed talking with her about her hobbies of scuba diving (perhaps where she gets her calmness) and drag racing (good training for speed, efficiency, and team work). In an environment where passive-aggressive behavior is the rule rather than the exception, Allison will be an asset to any team.

Please let me know if I can answer any questions.

Sincerely,

Andrea M. Trescot, MD
Diplomate American Board of Anesthesiology
Special Qualifications in Pain Management
Special Qualifications in Critical Care
Diplomate American Board of Pain Medicine
Diplomate American Academy of Pain Management
Fellow, Interventional Pain Practice
Diplomate American Board of Interventional Pain Physicians